ALEXANDER PEDLER,

Offg. Meteorological Reporter to the Govt. of Bengal.

SUMMARY OF THE METEOROLOGICAL AND RAINFALL OBSERVATIONS TAKEN IN BENGAL DURING THE MONTH OF APRIL 1886.

THE normal meteorological conditions of April in Bengal are very similar to those which were described for March, but with the continuance of the conditions they become stronger and more developed. These conditions, it will be remembered, are steadily increasing temperature over the whole of Northern India, accompanied by reducing pressure, the latter effect being the result of a series of oscillations in which the downward movement is greater than the upward. The wind system over the province in this month, as in March, is usually made up of three components, which vary in strength and persistency from year to year Easterly winds, the continuation probably of winds down the Assam Valley, prevail along the foot of the hills, and their influence is frequently felt even to the western limit of the province. Southerly and south westerly sea winds blow over the southern districts of Bengal, and as the month advances they gradually penetrate further into the interior of the province. At the same time hot westerly and north-westerly winds blow from Upper India over the greater part of Behar, Chutia Nagpur and the western districts of South-West and Central Bengal. By the interaction of these almost opposing wind systems, which differ in strength, humidity, &c, the hot weather storms of Bengal are almost certainly produced, and with the inland extension of the southerly moist winds, the rainfall brought by these storms advances into the interior of Bengal

The rainfall of April is practically entirely due to these storms, and the average distribution of the rainfall in Bengal during this month is simple. The lines of equal rainfall run mainly north and south, or parallel to the hills on the borders of Eastern and Northern Bengal. To the east of a line running through Julpigoree, Rungpore, Serajgunge, Burisal and Chittagong the rainfall varies from 4 to 6 inches. The rainfall diminishes westwards, and to the west of a curved line running through Bettia, Durbhunga, Doomka, Hazaribagh and the Cuttack hills, the average rainfall of the month of April is less than one inch. It is least in Shahabad, where it is barely a fifth of an inch.

The chief features of the meteorology of the past month have been—

1. An almost normal pressure, the mean pressure for the whole province not varying from the normal more than a thousandth of an inch.
2. Temperature slightly below the normal in all districts except Chutia Nagpur, the mean defect equalling about 0·8°.
3. Humidity and cloud proportion very distinctly below the normal, the defect in each instance equalling about 8 per cent.
4. The comparative absence of hot weather storms or nor'westers, and the lightness of the rain showers brought by them.
5. The very defective rainfall over the greater part of the province, the average rainfall of the whole province only representing 35 per cent. of the normal fall for April.

The early part of the month opened with conditions which were nearly normal except as regards temperature, which was largely below the average for the beginning of April. At this time weather was of ordinary hot season conditions over the province, and the only other point calling for notice was that slightly disturbed conditions existed over East Bengal, resulting in the formation of frequent hot weather storms, and considerable amounts of rain were reported from this district for the first twelve days of the month. With the existence of these disturbances a few local showers were reported from South-West and North Bengal. From this time up to about the 20th, a period of dry hot weather set in over the whole province, during which temperature rose with very great rapidity, and scarcely a single shower was reported; but from the 20th to the 25th a series of small storms occurred in the hill districts of North Bengal and the districts near the hills, which gave considerable amounts of rain. Again, from the latter date the area influenced by these disturbed conditions extended, and a few local storms with rain occurred in East and South-West Bengal, and in the remaining parts of North Bengal, while a few showers also fell in Behar and Chutia Nagpur; but on the whole these hot weather storms have been much fewer than usual, and most of them have been comparatively light in force, and have given only small amounts of rain.

Pressure was in the earlier parts of the month almost normal in all districts except North Behar, where there was an excess of 0·065″. During the period from the 9th to the 16th an extremely rapid fall of pressure took place, accompanying a very rapid increase of temperature, and for this time the mean pressure became nearly a tenth of an inch below the normal. A reaction then set in, so that for the third week of the month pressure was 0·023″ above the normal, while for the last week the excess had increased to 0·056″. For the whole month, therefore, the mean pressure has been practically normal, and, as stated before, the variation is a defect of about a thousandth of an inch.

Temperature was for the first nine days of the month particularly low, and for the period 2nd to the 9th inclusive, the mean temperature of the province was 4·5° below the normal. In South Behar during this time the defect was no less than 8·6°, in North Behar it was 6°, and in Chutia Nagpur 5·4°. A very rapid increase of temperature then succeeded, and for the second week the temperature had become nearly normal, and with the continued rapid increase in the third week, temperature had become 1·5° above the normal, and finally in the last week the excess had risen to 1·8°. For the whole month the only district which shows a slight excess temperature is Chutia Nagpur, where the excess is 0·6°. In South-West Bengal and North Behar the mean temperatures for the month have been practically normal, while in South Behar, East Bengal, and Orissa the defect has varied from 1° to 2°.

Rainfall has been largely below the normal, the actual average fall for the whole province for the month only equalling 35 per cent. of the normal. The fall in the various parts of the province has, however, been very irregularly distributed, and thus, for instance, while East Bengal has received nearly its usual amount of rain, Orissa has been almost rainless. East Bengal has received the largest amount, averaging 3·14 inches against a normal fall of 3·92 inches, or the actual fall has been 80 per cent. of the normal. North Bengal has received an average of 1·16 inches, the normal fall being 2·59 inches, and thus the actual has been only 45 per cent. of the normal. North Behar has received 0·25 inch, while the normal quantity is 0·74 inch, and this district therefore shows 34 per cent. of the normal. South-West Bengal has reported an average fall of 0·65 inch against the normal 2·15 inches, or the actual has been 30 per cent. of the normal. Chutia Nagpur has recorded an average of 0·12 inch against a normal of 0·47 inch, and the fall in South Behar is 0·11 inch against 0·42 inch, and thus both these districts have received 26 per cent. of the normal falls. Finally, Orissa has recorded an average fall of only 0·07 inch, the normal fall being 1·54 inches, and has only received a rainfall equal to 5 per cent. of the normal quantity.

As has been before stated, the rainfall in April is always very local in character, and this year has been no exception to the rule, and there are many districts where practically no rain has fallen during the month. This is the case in Orissa in all districts except Balasore. In South-West Bengal the districts which have received little or no rain are Midnapore, 24-Pergunnahs, Hooghly, Howrah, and Burdwan. In East Bengal the districts receiving the smallest amounts of rain were Chittagong and Furreedpore. In North Bengal, Dinagepore and Maldah has received little or no rain, and Bogra and Rajsnahye only small amounts. In North Behar, Mozufferpore, Chumparun and Sarun have received practically no rain, and in South Behar and Chutia Nagpur all districts have received very little rain, except Bhagulpore and Singbhoom.

The following small table will show the monthly rainfall over the whole province, from the commencement of the current year, compared with the normal fall for the same period. The numbers which are given are calculated out as percentages of the normal fall; thus 100 will represent a normal fall, a number larger than this an excess fall, and so on:—

	January.	February.	March.	April.	Actual rainfall for first four months expressed as a percentage of the normal fall for the period.
Orissa	122	4	444	5	119
South-West Bengal ...	71	1	240	30	79
East Bengal	23	0	180	80	96
North Bengal	3	31	126	45	58
North Behar	35	18	92	34	40
South Behar	28	34	237	26	71
Chutia Nagpur ...	24	2	196	26	80

From the last column of this table, which shows the total actual rainfall for the first four months of the year in each meteorological division expressed as a percentage of the normal for the same period, it will be seen that the only division which has received a fall equal to the normal has been Orissa, and that all other districts show defects varying from 5 up to 60 per cent. of the normal falls.

The following table gives the summary of the temperature and rainfall data of each of the seven Meteorological Divisions of the Province for the month of April 1886:—

SUMMARY OF THE METEOROLOGICAL AND RAINFALL OBSERVATIONS TAKEN IN BENGAL FOR THE WEEK ENDING FRIDAY, THE 7TH OF MAY 1886.

The meteorological conditions for the past week have been of the ordinary hot weather character, that is to say, weather has been generally fine, with lightly clouded skies, and very high temperature and low humidity, but from time to time these conditions have been more or less reversed by the occurrence of local storms with rain, which have of course reduced temperature, and increased the humidity and cloud proportion. These local storms are apparently dependent on the interaction of the three wind systems which blow over Bengal during this season of the year. Easterly winds generally blow over North Bengal and North Behar, westerly winds generally obtain in Chutia Nagpur and South Behar, while south-westerly winds blow in South-West Bengal and south-easterly winds in South-East Bengal. By the interaction of these wind systems, which differ in strength, humidity, &c., undoubtedly ascensional air motion must be produced, and this in the presence of moist winds probably gives rise to slight disturbance of the atmosphere, which is followed by the formation of the local hot weather storms called north-westers.

According to the strength of the three currents, so will be the amount and position of their interaction, and thus local storms accompanied by rain will be produced in various parts of the province depending on the relative strength of the wind systems. But from the nature of their production such storms will be most numerous, and will give the largest amount of rain, in those districts which are most exposed to moist winds, and consequently these storms are most numerous and yield the largest amounts of rain in East Bengal, North Bengal and South-West Bengal, while they occur comparatively seldom and give less rain in Chutia Nagpur, Orissa and Behar. During the week under review all these three wind systems have been present, and storms of this class have been tolerably frequent in East Bengal, North Bengal and South-West Bengal, while there have been storms, but less in number, in Orissa and Behar, and finally in Chutia Nagpur a very small number of storms have been reported. In the reports which have been received, it is also stated that some of the storms have been exceptionally severe, considerable amounts of damage being done at some stations.

Pressure was at the close of the previous week distinctly above the normal, the excess averaging about a tenth of an inch. Considerable barometric changes have taken place during the present week, and for the first three days there was rather a rapid fall. On the Tuesday pressure again fell over the greater part of the province, and on the following day a rapid rise was reported; but this was succeeded on the last two days of the week by large and rather rapid changes of pressure, the tendency of which was certainly in a downward direction, and thus during the week the mean pressure for the province has been very nearly normal, the average variation being an excess of only 0·002."

Temperature—Has been particularly high throughout the week, and in all districts the mean temperature has been above the normal. The excess temperature has been smallest in Orissa, East Bengal and North Behar, where the excess is less than 1°, while in South-West Bengal, North Behar and Chutia Nagpur the excess is about 2°. Very high maximum temperatures have been recorded during the week, and thus at Gya, on the 5th, maximum temperature was 109·6°, and on the same day Raneegunge reported 109°.

Rainfall.—Light to moderate rain, which has fallen during small local storms, has been general in the southern, eastern and northern districts. East Bengal has received the largest amount of rain, and averages for the week at all stations a rainfall of 2·50 inches against the normal 2·36 inches, and has therefore received a fall slightly in excess of the normal. North Bengal has received 1·52 inches against the normal 1·85 inches. South-West Bengal has received 0·92 inch, and the normal fall is 1·34 inches. Orissa has recorded an average amount of 0·52 inch, while the normal fall is 0·75 inch. In North Behar the average rainfall, which has been received during the week, is equal to 0·46 inch, while the normal is 0·69 inch, and in South Behar the fall has been 0·28 inch against the normal 0·37 inch. It will therefore be seen that all these districts have received a fair amount of rain, though in no case equalling the normal. Finally, in Chutia Nagpur the rainfall has been very scanty, and only averages 0·07 inch, while the normal fall is 0·58 inch, and thus the actual fall has only been about one eighth of the normal.

The following table gives the summary of the temperature and rainfall data of each of the seven meteorological divisions of the province for the week ending Friday, the 7th of May 1886 :—

The results of observations at the Alipore Observatory are not rigorously comparable with he registers of former years (at the Park-street Observatory). The barometer is about 3 feet igher at Alipore, and, other things being equal, reads therefore ·003 lower. The diurnal range of emperature is also greater at Alipore, and the mean temperature apparently about 0°·2 lower; and, nally, the thermometer, which furnished the record of temperature at the Surveyor-General's ffice during 20 years and upwards, is found to read 0·6 higher than the Kew standard hermometer, which is the standard of reference at the present Observatory.

The mean pressure, temperature, &c., are deduced from the traces of the Barograph and Thermograph, and from observations made at 6h, 10h, 16h and 22h.

The maximum and minimum temperatures are obtained from self-registering thermometers. All the thermometers are verified, and the readings have been corrected to a standard constructed and verified at the Kew Observatory. They are exposed under a thatched shed open at the sides, and are suspended four feet above the ground.

The barometer readings are corrected approximately to those of the standard Newman's No 8, formerly at the Surveyor-General's Office.

The hygrometric elements are obtained from Tables III, IV, and V of the official tables computed in the Meteorological Office, and based on Regnault's modifications of August's formula.

The directions and the movement of the wind are taken from the trace of a Beckley's anemograph.

The mouth of the rain-gauge is one foot above the ground.

General Remarks on the fluctuation of principal staples carried over the East Indian Railway during month ended 27th March 1886.

INCREASES.

Gram and Pulses.—The increase in these staples is attributable to better crops aided by an improved demand.

Rice (husked and unhusked).—An abundant harvest and active markets account for the increase in this commodity.

Sugar. The increase in this staple is due to better crops and good prices in the mofussil markets.

Spices.—This increase is assignable to ordinary fluctuation of trade.

DECREASES.

Coal and Coke.—There was an increase in weight carried and a decrease in receipts owing to large despatches having been made to the Bengal and North-Western Railway, and to less demand on the North-Western and Rajputana-Malwa Railways.

Cotton.—In this staple also there was an increase in the weight carried and a decrease in the earnings, which is assignable to short lead traffic owing to high rates having restricted business in the Calcutta market.

Wheat.—The deterioration and almost entire exhaustion of the old stocks of this staple and the new wheat not being in the market are the causes for this decrease.

Hides and Skins.—There was an active demand in the Calcutta market, principally for North-West hides, but the supplies were scanty, and but little business could be done, which led to the decrease in these staples.

Lac.—Declining prices and want of business in the home markets account for this decrease.

Brass and Copper.—Dull markets in the North-West are assigned as the cause of the falling off in these metals.

Iron.—The decrease in this article is attributable to the mofussil marts having been overstocked.

Opium.—The decrease under this head was owing to fluctuation in despatches from the Government depôts where it is manufactured.

Railway material, Foreign.—Due to less demand from foreign railways which were under active construction last year.

Salt.—The decrease in this commodity was due to heavy despatches having been made in March 1885 owing to a panic among the Calcutta dealers caused by a rumour to the effect that the salt duties were about to be enhanced.

Saltpetre.—This decrease was due to the Calcutta market being quiet.

Seeds.—An increase in weight carried, attended with a decrease in receipts, is due to the traffic having been for shorter distances.

Tobacco.—The decrease under this head is due to fluctuation of trade and competition by other Railways.

Government Stores.—This is accounted for by the heavy despatches to the Punjab made in 1885 having ceased.

Separate accounts, under section 10 of Act XI of 1859, were opened in respect of the 3 shares from which arrears are due. These shares were once put up to sale for arrears of revenue on the 5th January last, and the bid at which the said shares were knocked down was below the amount due to Government. Against this sale an appeal was preferred to the Commissioner of the division, who upset the sale on the 19th March last on grounds of illegality, and directed to take steps under section 14 of the sale law. Accordingly a notice was served upon the proprietors, but no one paid the arrears. Hence the entire mehal is now advertized for sale.

CALCUTTA, the 17*th May* 1886.

SUMMARY OF THE METEOROLOGICAL AND RAINFALL OBSERVATIONS TAKEN IN BENGAL FOR THE WEEK ENDING FRIDAY, THE 14TH OF MAY 1886.

AT the commencement of the week under review a strong westerly wind current commenced to drive back the more or less easterly current, which had previously obtained over a large part of the province With the strengthening of the westerly wind current, local storms became far less numerous over the western divisions than they had been, though still some few storms occurred in North and East Bengal; the air also became very much drier, and for the first three days at some of the extreme western stations of the province humidity was particularly low, the saturation at Buxar being only 10 per cent. of the possible amount on the morning of the 10th, and on the same day it was only 11 per cent. at Hazaribagh, and 17 and 18 per cent. respectively at Dehree and Patna. From the 10th, however, a change in the wind systems commenced, winds became more easterly at the northern stations, and stronger and more southerly winds set in at the southern stations, bringing up considerable amounts of moisture. At Darjeeling, too, on the 10th, a very strong north-easterly wind was reported; the wind velocity for the previous 24 hours being 20 miles per hour, which is decidedly high for an inland station like Darjeeling. At this time pressure over the province was decidedly below the normal, while temperature was in most districts rather largely above it, the excess at such stations as Calcutta equalling no less than 7·7° above the normal. The northerly wind current which was shown at Darjeeling on the 10th then extended, and on the morning of the 11th it had embraced the whole of North Bengal and North Behar and parts of South Behar and Chutia Nagpur, and with the setting in of this unusual current pressure rose extremely rapidly over the northern and western parts of the province. As moist southerly winds were blowing over the southern and central parts of the province on this day, these northerly winds were of almost opposite direction, and their meeting caused a large amount of interaction or interference, which must have resulted in the usual ascensional air motion, and which was of course followed by heavy rain. On this day rainfall was general and in some cases rather heavy in North Bengal, in some parts of North Behar and over the greater part of East Bengal, but with the continuance of this action on the following day the area of rainfall rapidly extended, and on the 12th rainfall was reported from almost every recording station in the province except at a few in South Behar, Chutia Nagpur and Orissa. In many parts of the province the rainfall was particularly heavy, and falls in excess of three or four inches were rather numerous. The northerly current continued to blow over a considerable part of the province on the 12th and 13th, but on the 14th it was evident the abnormal current was being driven back, and on this day winds were strongly easterly over the whole province, though at the northern stations they were somewhat northerly also, while at the southern stations winds were south-easterly. With the continuance of these conditions, therefore, which could only result in interaction between opposing wind systems, weather conditions remained disturbed, and local storms with rain have been rather frequent for the last part of the week over parts of the province. From a meteorological point of view therefore the week has been decidedly important, and moderate to heavy rain has fallen in all districts except Chutia Nagpur.

Pressure was during the previous week on the average nearly normal; during the present week the changes of pressure have been large and rapid; for the first two days pressure was falling; this was succeeded on the 10th by a slight rise, and with the inrush of northerly winds above referred to on the 11th, an extremely rapid increase took place in the districts affected. This was followed by a period of rather irregular changes, and for the whole week the mean pressure for the province has been about 0·04″ below the normal. This defect is not quite so equally distributed as it might be, as at two stations, Dacca and Bankipur, pressure has been very slightly above the normal.

Temperature over the greater part of the province has been subject to very considerable and rapid changes during the week. Before the setting in of the unusual conditions, and the occurrence of the heavy rainfall previously described, temperature was for several days largely above the normal, and very high maximum temperatures were recorded. At this time at many stations temperature was from 5° to 7° above the normal for the period, but immediately after the heavy rain, temperature fell many degrees. Thus at Calcutta from 4 P. M. of the 12th to 4 P. M. of the 13th the fall of temperature was 26°. After the rainfall temperature was largely below the normal, the temperature at such stations as Berhampur and Jessore on the 13th being 15° below the normal, while at Burdwan, Dacca, Patna and Gya the defect exceeded 9°. For the whole week the mean temperature has, however, only been very slightly below the normal in most districts, the average defect being about 0·6°.

Rainfall has been frequent during the week over a large part of the province, and in many districts very heavy. The 12th was the day of most general and heaviest rainfall, and on this day Ghatal reported 6·20 inches, Tajpore 6·02 inches, Bongong 5·71 inches, and Satkhira 5·14 inches, while the following stations received from 3 to 5 inches:—Calcutta, Howrah, Mohesreka, Burdwan, Tumlook, Dum-Dum, Busseerhat, Culna, Cutwa, Ranaghat, Khoolna and Jessore. The rainfall was therefore particularly heavy on this day in South-West Bengal. For the week the largest average fall has been received in South-West Bengal, which has registered 3·06 inches, the normal fall for the week being 1·23 inches.

East Bengal has received an average fall of 2·87 inches, the normal fall being 2·48 inches The fall in North Bengal has been 1·30 inches, the normal being 1·67 inches. Orissa has received 1·52 inches against a normal of 1·06 inches, and North Behar 1·03 inches against the normal amount of 0·75 inch. Much smaller amounts have been received in South Behar, which only averages 0·42 inch against a normal of 0·47 inch, and finally Chutia Nagpur has only received an average fall of 0·19 inch, while the normal is 0·65 inch, a fall less than a third of the normal. In fact during the week under review good and seasonable rainfall has fallen over the whole province with the exception of Chutia Nagpur.

The following table gives the summary of the temperature and rainfall data of each of the seven meteorological divisions of the province for the week ending Friday, the 14th of May 1886 :—

The mean pressure, temperature, &c., are deduced from the traces of the Barograph and Thermograph.

The maximum and minimum temperatures are obtained from self-registering thermometers. All the thermometers are verified, and the readings have been corrected to a standard constructed and verified at the Kew Observatory. They are exposed under a thatched shed open at the sides, and are suspended four feet above the ground.

The barometer readings are corrected approximately to those of the standard Newman's No 8*, formerly at the Surveyor-General's Office.

The hygrometric elements are obtained from Tables III, IV, and V of the official tables computed in the Meteorological Office, and based on Regnault's modifications of August's formula.

The directions and the movement of the wind are taken from the trace of a Beckley's anemograph

The mouth of the rain-gauge is one foot above the ground.

* A special census of the Europeans in the Darjiling Municipality was recently taken, as the census of this section of the community, taken in February 1881, was not reliable owing to the Europeans being at a minimum in that month. The number of the natives remains as before, as it was not necessary to re-census them. The ratios have consequently been calculated on the revised population under all heads in the above table, except "Age," the ratios under which have been omitted, inasmuch as the census of the Europeans, above alluded to, cannot be employed as a basis of calculation owing to the results of the census under this head not having been recorded under the authorised form of age classification.

Rice and paddy have mainly contributed to this satisfactory result.

Jute ... ... 237·31 tons.

The traffic under this head has been 1,396·18 tons against 1,158·87 carried during the corresponding period of 1885, being an increase of 20 per cent.

Miscellaneous ... ... 808 57 tons.

Under this head are included numerous articles of traffic, and it is not possible to trace the fluctuation with accuracy. The increase, however, was expected in the face of a falling off last month.

Piece-goods .. .. 48·18 tons.

Local markets are being well stocked against the approaching rains, when carting into the interior is difficult.

Railway material ... ... 853·19 tons.

There has been a continued falling off under this head for some time, and the present increase is due to conveyance of materials for the Assam-Behar State Railway.

Sugar ... ... 16·51 tons.

It is satisfactory to notice the gradual expansion of this traffic.

Decreases.

Ginger ... ... 166·05 tons.

The increased despatches under this head for some time past will explain the present falling off.

Gunny-bags ... ... 28·46 tons.

There has been little doing under this head during the month under notice.

Salt ... ... 18·62 tons.

The decrease is expected in the face of increased despatches in January and February last.

Seeds ... ... 901·68 tons.

It appears from enquiries made that the mustard seed, which principally contributes to this traffic, has not yielded a fair crop this year.

Tea ... ... 6·83 tons.

This is the end of the season, and a small sale was held during the month.

Tobacco ... ... 233·34 tons.

The decrease is principally due to a falling off in the despatches from Siliguri, 1,932 maunds having only been sent this month from that station against 12,457 maunds in the corresponding period last year, due to indifferent crop in the neighbourhood of that station.

CALCUTTA, the 25th May 1886.

SUMMARY OF THE METEOROLOGICAL AND RAINFALL OBSERVATIONS TAKEN IN BENGAL FOR THE WEEK ENDING FRIDAY, THE 21ST OF MAY 1886.

THE report for the previous week showed that weather conditions over the province were decidedly disturbed, owing to the interaction between more or less opposite wind systems. At the close of the week, however, these conditions were gradually disappearing, but still for the first three days of the present week conditions were sufficiently disturbed to give a large number of local storms, which in most instances brought light rain. At first these storms with rain were general over almost the whole province, but the area affected by them has gradually contracted, and towards the close of the week the rainfall was practically confined to North Bengal. The winds for the second-half of the week became very light and rather irregular over the whole province, and while thus winds were falling off in strength at the head of the Bay, a very strong advance of monsoon winds was taking place in the extreme south of the Bay; heavy rain was also recorded at some of the Ceylon stations. Thus at Galle on the 18th and 19th nearly eight inches of rain were reported. This is the second advance of monsoon winds which has taken place up the Bay during the present month, and it is probable that this second burst will advance further up the Bay than the previous one did.

Pressure—During the first two days of the week was rising at the majority of stations; and it was lowest at the western and highest at the south-eastern stations, but at this time there was also a comparatively low pressure area in the south-west corner of the Bay, and this comparatively low pressure has remained persistent almost throughout the week. Towards the close of the week also pressure generally fell over Bengal, but notwithstanding that the fall was in some cases rather rapid, pressure was at the close of the week largely above the normal over the province, the excess in many instances equalling 0·15″. For the whole week the mean pressure of the province has been almost 0·1″ above the normal.

Temperature—Changes have been generally small at most stations throughout the week, but with the cessation of rainfall in some districts, and the diminution of its quantity in others, the variations of temperature have generally been in an upward direction. Thus at the commencement of the week temperature was in defect in Chutia Nagpur and South Behar by about 5°, though in other districts the defect was generally not larger than 1° to 2°, while at the close of the week it was only slightly below the normal in almost all districts, while in East Bengal it was even in slight excess. For the whole week the mean temperature of the province has been 2·8° below the normal. In all cases the mean temperature is below the normal, and the extreme variations are from a defect of 6·7° in South Behar to one of 0·3° in East Bengal.

Rainfall—Has been fairly well distributed over the whole province during the first three or four days of the week, while at its close, as previously stated, all divisions were for practical purposes rainless, excepting in North Bengal at the districts in and near the hills. In most divisions rain has fallen at almost every station, and on about one or two days of the week. The largest average rainfall has been received in North Bengal, which has registered 1·76 inches against the normal amount of 2·04 inches. East Bengal has recorded an average fall of 0·71 inch against the normal 1·55 inches. Both these districts have therefore received falls very considerably below the normal. North Behar has registered a general fall of 1·10 inches against the normal 0·53 inch, and has therefore received twice the normal amount. South-West Bengal has received 0·97 inch against a normal of 0·82 inch, and South Behar a fall of 0·65 inch against the normal 0·61 inch; and Orissa has recorded 1·67 inches against the normal 0·57 inch, and thus all these districts have received falls very decidedly above the normal for the week. Finally, Chutia Nagpur has reported a general fall of 0·44 inch, while the normal is 0·50 inch, and thus the actual fall is nearly equal to the normal.

The following table gives the summary of the temperature and rainfall data of each of the seven meteorological divisions of the province for the week ending Friday, the 21st of May 1886 :—

The mean pressure, temperature, &c., are deduced from the traces of the Barograph and Thermograph, and from observations made at 6h, 10h, 16h and 22h.

The maximum and minimum temperatures are obtained from self-registering thermometers. All the thermometers are verified, and the readings have been corrected to a standard constructed and verified at the Kew Observatory. They are exposed under a thatched shed open at the sides, and are suspended four feet above the ground.

The barometer readings are corrected approximately to those of the standard Newman's No. 86, formerly at the Surveyor-General's Office,

The hygrometric elements are obtained from Tables III, IV, and V of the official tables computed in the Meteorological Office, and based on Regnault's modifications of August's formula.

The directions and the movement of the wind are taken from the trace of a Beckley's anemograph.

The mouth of the rain-gauge is one foot above the ground.
